WEBINAR DETAILS

Oil Spills and Property Values

Date: August 25, 2010Duration: 2 hours

This 2-hour webinar offers critical insights on how appraisers can accurately value contaminated properties, especially in light of recent environmental disasters such as the Gulf oil spill. Environmental contamination is found in many properties - industrial buildings, retail and even residential subdivisions – prepare yourself and broaden your assignments!

After attending this webinar, you will:

- Identify methodologies used to value properties impacted by environmental contamination
- Describe the effects that contamination may have on real property
- Compare methods used in the analysis of other adverse conditions

Speaker:

Tom Jackson, MAI, PhD, is the President of Real Property Analytics, Inc. based in College Station, TX, where he specializes in analyzing real estate that may be impacted by environmental contamination as well as other complex valuation-related issues.
